Notes:

- The details about where items are located are there for two reasons… 1) because high-anxiety situations can cause your mind to get scrambled or draw a blank and 2) in case you are sick, incapacitated, or away and someone else needs to do this packing for you.

- The highlighted items are what we'd pack if we could only leave with what we could carry on foot – the full list is what we'd pack if we were leaving by car.

- Also recommended is having one or more places in your home where you have stashed some cash (in small bills as people may not be willing or able to make change) – add those items to your list.

- If you have pets, put their stuff on the list too.

- Inside of a large duffle bag we store our extra duffle bags AND our little zippered travel pouches containing all of the miniature travel supplies that we take with us on trips. So it's easy to just throw those travel pouches into a duffle and know that we have the basic toiletries covered.

- Ziplock bags are your friend. Have an extra box of gallon-size near or inside of your travel bags so you can dump stuff in them in a hurry.

- We have emergency supplies in a rolling suitcase and a backpack (so we can carry them easily) in our home – and in a backpack in our car. This includes first aid supplies, extra toiletries, some food, etc. So even just grabbing our wallets, passports, and these bags is bare-bones good. (We switch out the perishable items in our emergency supplies every September 11th… easy to remember.)

- If there's extra room in our car, we'd also pack some of our emergency water. We have emergency water in gallon jugs in the house and by the car (so we could load it in the car faster if necessary).

- If your car is parked in a garage with an electric gate (as ours is) get instructions on how to MANUALLY open the gate cuz very often the electricity be out in a natural disaster. If you can't get this info, consider parking on the street for a while during you've-been-warned conditions.

- My husband has his PRINTED copy of this list and I have my PRINTED copy and we put one near our earthquake supplies. Just so we can each have a copy we can easily grab and start working off of.
